Practise answering one question over and over, giving a slightly longer answer each time.

Give short answers to each question and see if your partner can come up with follow up questions to make you say more.

Match these follow up questions to the questions above.

Did you have any problems communicating there?

Why did you choose that subject?

Do you enjoy it?

What was your favourite place?

What do you think about it?

Practise a whole BULATS Speaking Part One. Interview your partner for approximately four minutes, in this order:

1. Questions about themselves, where they live and where they work or study
2. Questions about their work (if they are presently working) or studies (if they are a student)
3. Questions about one of: travel, language learning, future career prospects or interests/hobbies

Ask at least three or four questions about each topic, including follow up questions (especially if their answers are short).
