

Nationality Word Endings

Instructions for teachers

Cut up one set of cards per group of two or three students. Take out the section titles. Decide which sections from below you want to practise and then decide if you want to leave out any cards, for example countries that they might not have heard of or the trick cards.

Shuffle the cards up and give out one pack to each group. Before you try any of the actual games, it can be a good idea to ask students to put the cards in columns by ending of the nationality word. If they get stuck, you can give out the column heading cards and/ or tell them how many cards should be in each column. Then can then check their answers with a copy of the worksheets below.

Note that in all the activities it is only the ending of the nationality words which means that the words match, it doesn't matter what is cut off the country word, changed in the country word, etc before the ending is added.

Nationality word endings card games

Nationality word endings pelmanism

Students spread the cards face down on the table and take turns trying to find pairs of words which have the same ending when they are converted into nationality word adjectives. If they are wrong, they put the cards back in the same place and play passes to the next person. They do the same round and round their group until all the remaining cards don't match or the teacher stops the game.

Country and nationality words snap

Students deal out all the cards but don't look at the words they have been given. They take turns turning over one card from the top of their pack and placing it on the table. If the nationality word adjectives of the places on the last card and the previous one have the same ending, students should race to shout "Snap". If they do actually match, the first person to shout "Snap" can take all the cards that are face up on the table. If they shout "Snap" when the last two words actually have different endings, they don't win the cards and have to give two cards to the other players as a punishment.

After they have finished the game(s), students can write the nationality words for each country down and/ or test each other by:

- Reading out a nationality word and seeing if their partner can make the country word
- Reading out a country word and seeing if their partner can make the nationality word
- Reading out a nationality word ending and helping their partner say as many examples of adjectives with that ending as they can, giving their partner hints like first letters and locations of suitable countries if needed
