

Negative adjectives and offers with will

Choose one of the adjectives below and say something that is making your life difficult using it, e.g. "My cram school is boring" with "boring". Your partner should then try to make an offer with "will" like "I'll give you the address of my cram school. It's not boring". If you accept it, change roles and do the same. If not, they should try again with different offer until you accept one, or until they run out of ideas for suitable offers and give up. Then take turns doing the same.

Useful language for responding to offers

- Thanks. That's a great help./ That's very kind./ That's just what I need./ That...
- Thanks for the offer, but...

Suggested negative adjectives to explain your difficulties with

| | | |
|------------|---------------|----------------|
| angry | annoying | awful |
| bored | boring | broken |
| cancelled | closed | cold |
| dangerous | difficult | dirty |
| disgusting | dry | expensive |
| far | finished | hard |
| heavy | hot | humid |
| hungry | late | lazy |
| lost | loud | messy |
| missing | noisy | not ... enough |
| old | quiet | run out |
| sad | sleepy | slow |
| smelly | sold out | stupid |
| terrible | thirsty | tired/ tiring |
| too... | unfashionable | unhealthy |
| wet | wrong | yucky |

Will for offers grammar presentation

Why is "will" more common than "going to" in offers like those you made to each other?

What is the difference between "Don't worry. I'll go to the shops and get some" and "Don't worry. I'm going to (go to) the shops. I'll get you some"?

Brainstorming adjectives

Without looking above, brainstorm adjectives and classify them as positive, negative and neutral/ mixed/ it depends.

Look above and brainstorm more, for example opposites of the words above.

Compare your extra ideas as a class.